Overview

• Chapter 1: Inbound market statistics provides insights on key statistics about Chinese travellers and who they are. It takes a look at Britain and its competitive set as well as activities of Chinese visitors in the UK.

• Chapter 2: Understanding the market takes a close look at Chinese consumer trends, booking, planning and further travel behaviour of this source market. Perceptions of Britain held by the Chinese are also highlighted.

• Chapter 3: Access and travel trade shows how the Chinese travel to the UK, how to best cater for their needs and wants during their stay and gives key insights into the Chinese travel trade. Further ways of working with VisitBritain and other useful research resources are pointed out.

Chapter 1: Inbound Market Statistics
1: Inbound market statistics

Chapter summary

• China is the most valuable market for international tourism expenditure with US$261.1bn spent abroad in 2016 by Chinese travellers.

• The Chinese outbound market is booming: visits abroad more than doubled in 5 years, from about 41m overnight stays in 2011 to 85m in 2016. By 2020, it is forecast to exceed 110m trips overseas.

• Hong Kong and Macao are usually the most visited destinations by Chinese travellers. With more of them now venturing further away, the USA, France, Germany and Australia were the most popular destinations outside of Asia for Chinese visitors in 2016.

• China was the 24\textsuperscript{th} largest inbound source market for the UK in 2016, and the 12\textsuperscript{th} for spend. Chinese visitors could be good advocates for Britain as 73% would be ‘extremely’ likely to recommend Britain for a holiday.

Chapter 1.1: Key statistics

Key insights

• China was the 24th largest inbound source market for the UK in 2016, and the 12th for spend.
• 2016 was a record year in terms of nights spent in the UK for the Chinese market, but it was the second-best for visits and spend, after 2015 reached record levels for both.
• 46% of Chinese visits to the UK were made by holidaymakers in 2016.
• Business visits’ share of inbound (18% of 2016 visits) has more than halved compared to ten years ago (41% in 2006).
• In 2016 Chinese visitors spent 65% of their nights in the UK outside of London.
• Students make up 42% of the nights spent by Chinese visitors in the UK: China is a key market for study tourism.
• Chinese visitors in the UK like going shopping, visiting parks and gardens, as well as museums and art galleries.

1.1 Key statistics: journey purpose

Journey purpose 2016

- 46% of all visits to the UK from China were made for holiday purposes, followed by 22% by those visiting friends and relatives in 2016.
- China is still a growing market: in 2015, only 30% of holiday visits from Chinese residents (excluding British expats) to the UK were made by repeat visitors, compared to 63% across all markets.
- On average a Chinese holidaymaker came 1.6 times to the UK in the past 10 years.

Journey purpose trend (visits 000s)

- Holiday visits have led the volume growth in the Chinese market since 2012. In 2015, there were more Chinese holiday visits than all other purposes added together for the first time ever, reaffirming this trend.
- While there were slightly more business visits from China in 2016 than in 2006, their proportion of all visits has more than halved in 10 years (from 41% in 2006, when they were the leading purpose of visits, to 18% in 2016).
- In 2016 there were even more visits to friends and family (VFR) than business visits. VFR visitors are more likely to be repeat visitors than holiday visitors.

1.1 Key statistics: seasonality

Seasonality 2016

- Visits from China are very seasonal: in 2016 47% of all visits from China were made in July-September.
- Visits during the summer started driving the growth in 2012, around the same time as holiday visits started growing more than other journey purposes. Seasonal direct flights between China and the UK also supported this trend.
- In recent years, October-December has become the second-most popular time to visit the UK. At the beginning of October, there is a week of public holidays in China known as the Golden Week.

As a long haul destination, Chinese travellers tend to stay for a medium or long trip, and are less likely to stay 1-3 nights.

Trips of 15+ nights are also quite popular, especially for VFR and study visits.

64% of all staying visits included a stay in a hotel or a guest house in 2014-2016. However, Chinese visitors spend more nights in a hostel/university/school or a rented house/flat (43% of all nights respectively), mainly because of the number of nights spent by study visitors.

Regional spread (2014-2016)

- Chinese visitors show an above-average spread across the UK’s nations and regions. London is the leading destination for a staying trip to Britain, but the South East, North West and Scotland are also popular.
- Indeed 70% of all nights spent by Chinese visitors in the UK in 2014-2016 were spent outside of London, compared to 60% for the all-inbound market average.
- If we consider the regional spread by purpose of visit, 54% of nights spent in the UK by Chinese holidaymakers were spent in London in 2014-2016. However, over half of the nights for each of the other purpose of visits were spent in the rest of England.
- Visits from China have an above average propensity to feature rural and coastal areas of Britain.

1.1 Key statistics: purchase of transport and package tours

Transport services purchased before or during trip (%)

- Chinese visitors are more likely than the average to take taxis or to take public transport when staying in a town or a city, with 44% and 64% respectively doing so, compared to 32% and 53% respectively for the all-market average.
- When getting out of a town or city, they are also more likely to get on a train (41%), but also to take a public bus or coach (13%), or even a private one for a group (10%). However they are less likely to drive a car within the UK, compared to other markets.
- Usually they also tend to prefer booking those transport elements before they travel, with more Chinese holiday visitors booking their airport transfer, train or coach travel, and rental cars before the trip than during.
1.2 Visitor demographics

Visitor characteristics

• The average Chinese visitor is younger than the all-market average visitor: 51% of the 2014-2016 visits from China were made by people aged 0-34 years old. The 25-34 and 35-44 year-old segments are leading the growth in visits for this market.

• The overall gender ratio of visitors is evenly balanced. However, when looking at trips by journey purpose, there are more women than men for every journey purpose except for business visits.

• Most inbound visits to the UK from Chinese residents were made by Chinese nationals (85% of all visits), but 21% of VFR visits were made by British nationals in 2016.

• Less than a third of the holiday visits are repeat visits (excluding British expats).

• Chinese visitors are more likely to advocate for a stay in Britain than the all-market average: 73% of Chinese past visitors are ‘extremely’ likely to recommend it, against 69% across all inbound markets.

Visits to the UK in (000) 2013

- Chinese visitors mainly come from the two major metropolitan areas: Beijing and Shanghai.
- Other main cities are also represented: 8% of visits originated in Guangzhou-Shenzhen-Dongguan, for example. Residents from top 2 and top 3 cities are also represented (3% of visits were made by people from Nanjing, 2% from Chengdu).
- Connectivity reflect these key Chinese source cities.

1.3 Britain and competitors

Market size, share and growth potential

- The UK was the 30th most visited destination by Chinese residents in 2016.
- Forecasts suggest there is the potential for steady growth in the number of visits to the UK during the next decade.
- Of those who came to the UK for a holiday, 44% considered France, 31% Germany and 27% Italy as an alternative holiday destination.
- France is the most visited destination by the Chinese in Europe. However, it has lost some market share when compared to other destinations, and there were fewer visits from China in 2016 than in 2015. At that time, France might have been impacted by the recent terrorist attacks as safety is a key concern across Chinese international travellers.
- Overall more Chinese tourists are venturing long haul than before. The percentage share of visits to Northeast Asia is decreasing: from 65% of all outbound visits in 2011 to 55% in 2016.

1.4 Inbound activities

Inbound Britain

• Shopping is the number one activity which most Chinese visits will feature, followed by visiting parks or gardens, and museums or galleries.

• Built heritage sites, especially castles and historic houses, are important attractions for many visitors from China too.

• Chinese visitors are more likely than other visitors to go to a theatre, a show, live music event or a festival while in Britain.

• Walking in the countryside or by the coast is also more popular among Chinese visitors than the all-market average.

• The Chinese also have a special interest in British football teams.

Chapter 2: Understanding the market
2. Understanding the market

Chapter summary

- China has the largest population in the world, with growing young middle and affluent classes. Most Chinese live in large urban areas.
- Hong Kong and Macao welcomed a third of Chinese outbound visits in 2016; Northeast and Southeast Asia accounted for 77%. However, Chinese middle and upper classes now explore destinations further away than ever before and this trend is set to grow.
- There are few public holidays in China, but going away is a key aspiration: it is an opportunity to show your social status and learn.
- They have a very short lead-in time: 61% of past visitors to Britain booked their trips 2 months to few weeks before their departure.
- Word-of-mouth is the most important influence on destination choice.
- The Chinese rate Britain highly for its cultural heritage and contemporary culture, associating Britain strongly with museums and films. They are mostly interested in symbolic elements: the Royal Family, Shakespeare, Sherlock Holmes, Harry Potter and Downton Abbey.

2.1 Structural drivers

Demographics & society

• With a population of around 1.4 billion, China is still the most populated country in the world. However, with an ageing population, it is set to be overtaken by India by 2030, and the population will start to decline.

• Standard Chinese or Mandarin is the nationwide official language. However some regions may use others, such as Cantonese (or Yue) which is Guangdong’s official language.

• The Chinese economy is still growing rapidly. In 2015, for the first time, the number of High Net Worth Individuals (HNWIs, those with investable assets worth more than US$1million) surpassed 1 million people.

• The rapid increase of Chinese urban income is expected to drive overall income growth. Spending is broadening beyond consumer staples: Chinese people now spend around 9.2% of their personal spending on “Fun”, which includes travelling.

• In 2014, it was estimated that only 4% of the Chinese population had a passport. By 2025, this number is expected to reach 12%.

2.1 Structural drivers: general market overview

General market conditions

- China is the UK’s 24th largest source market in terms of visits and 12th most valuable for spend. The UK received the ‘Approved Destination Status’ (ADS) in 2005, making it possible for Chinese nationals to travel here more easily.
- The Chinese economy has dramatically changed over recent decades and the economy of the world’s most populated country keeps growing. However, in recent years economic growth has slowed down from previous highs and tier 2 and tier 3 cities have been largely helping to sustain the real estate market.
- McKinsey’s ‘Urban World: Global Consumers Report’ predicts that Beijing and Shanghai are set to have among the largest rates of consumption growth between 2015 and 2030. Guangzhou and Shenzhen are also on McKinsey’s Tier 1 in terms of household consumption of services in China. Tianjin, which now offers direct, stopping flights to the UK, is also quoted as a key city for consumption growth.
- Capgemini’s World Wealth Report suggests that in 2015 Chinese HNWIs (High Net Worth Individuals) surpassed 1 million people for the first time, up 16% on 2014 to 1,034,000 HNWIs, meaning that it ranks in 4th place behind the US, Japan and Germany.
- The Chinese population is set to increase slightly until 2030 when it is forecast to start decreasing. The fertility rate in China is indeed under the threshold for population renewal, as a consequence of the one-child policy, although this was softened in 2013. The Chinese population is also showing signs of ageing, with a median age above the global and Asian averages.

2.2 Consumer trends

- More and more Chinese people have access to travel: the growing urban middle-class lead this trend. Goldman Sachs’ estimates reveal that about 4% had a passport in 2014, but this is forecast to reach 12% by 2025. This means that around 150m Chinese people would be able to travel to other outbound destinations than Macao and Hong Kong.

- As Chinese travellers are getting more like their Western counterparts, new trends emerge. With new visa-free destinations or easier application processes, the FIT segment is growing. Family travels, experiences and winter sports are also gaining momentum.

- Use of internet in China is booming: according to the CNNIC, as of December 2016 there were 731m Internet users in China, up 43% on 2011 and up 434% on 2006.

- 53% of mobile users in China were using smartphones in 2016.

- Travel mobile apps are especially appreciated among the Generation Y luxury travellers: 35% will use WeChat shares by travel advisers as their travel information source, and 37% apps’ push messages.

2.2 Consumer trends: overall travel trends

Motivation and attitudes to holidays

• China’s outbound market is booming. There were over 85m international visits made from China in 2016, making it the third largest market in volume of international arrivals after the US and Germany. It is forecast to overtake Germany by 2021.

• The rising urban middle class in China is primarily responsible for the growth of the outbound travel market. In 2013, about 11% of China’s population could be considered as part of the middle class. With 9% of Chinese personal spending going on recreational activities, spending on ‘fun’ activities, which includes travel, is much lower than in other countries. However, the young urban mass affluent segment that is set to grow in the coming years are already the ones spending more on those activities, making a sizeable growth opportunity for the Chinese outbound market.

• To support that growth in international visits, more and more Chinese people are becoming passport owners: from 4% in 2014 to 12% by 2025, according to Goldman Sachs.

• Approved destination status countries have multiplied, enabling the Chinese to travel to newer destinations. Every year, more countries are changing their access rules for Chinese travellers in order to tap into the world’s most valuable outbound market. At the end of 2015, 45 countries were already granting visa-on-arrival for Chinese tourists.

• Ahead of the 2018 EU-China tourism year, European countries, including the UK, Italy and France, have followed this trend and have lowered the threshold for the approval of certain visas and simplified the visa issuing procedure to attract more Chinese tourists.

• Among the most valuable tourists from China are the young (born after 1980), affluent Chinese travellers. The 2016 Hurun report shows that Europe was their most visited tourist destination in 2016 and is set to remain so for the next three years.

2.2 Consumer trends: overall travel trends

Travel trends among Generation Y luxury travellers

• According to Marriott/Hurun, luxury travellers aged 18-36 would spend RMB420,000 on travel per household on average (about £47,740). In the coming years, exploring the world, going on an adventure, a cruise, a polar exploration, or a road trip will become more popular: they like experiences they can brag about. But in 2015 shopping was still an important part of their travel experience representing over half of their travel spending.

• In 2015, 82% of this group travelled for leisure. Other key travel motivations include exploring the world (40%), going on an international cruise (26%) or an adventure trip (23%).

• They also travel abroad for other motives than leisure: leisure holidays only represented 69% of their time abroad in 2015 (17 days of their 25 days abroad on average).

• They are experienced travellers: they have already visited 13 countries on average. In 2015, 61% of them went to Europe. The UK was their 11th most visited destination and their 7th most memorable destination. France is usually preferred as a shopping destination, however. Japan and Australia are also among their favourite destinations.

• For 36% of these young luxury travellers the National Day Golden Week that takes place at the beginning of October is their favourite time to travel – reaffirming the opportunity offered by this week-long public holiday time in China. The Chinese New Year is also becoming more of a travel period for those affluent travellers who have a family.

• Travelling with family and friends is indeed a growing trend: 89% of those interviewed quoted that as their most memorable experience. Friends also play an important part in the choice of the destination as 40% of the respondents to the Hurun survey were inspired to travel by their friends, just ahead of online sources of information (36%), travel agencies (34%) and their family (33%).

• 70% of them will prefer using the services of a travel agency for the personalised services they offer, 57% for their expertise, and 54% for itinerary planning.

• However, online booking methods have also become more popular: 41% booked their hotels through a third-party reservation website, 30% via a travel agency and 25% on the hotel website. This also shows how those travellers are becoming more independent in arranging their travel details.

2.3 Booking and planning

- Chinese travellers have a very short lead-in time: 61% of past visitors to Britain booked their trips 2 months to few weeks before their departure.
- However 53% had decided to visit Britain over 3 months before their date of travel.
- They are more likely than average to plan their trip with precision before leaving their country.
- When travelling to Britain, they would prefer to book travel and accommodation together, mostly online.
- They would also be more likely to purchase tickets for their activities before they travel.

76% of Chinese visitors to Britain booked their trip less than 2 months in advance.
2.3 Booking and planning: booking channels and ticket sales

How trips to Britain were booked

- Online bookings are the Chinese travellers' favourite booking methods when arranging their travel to Britain.
- Chinese visitors to Britain still tend to book their travel to Britain and accommodation together (71% of visitors).
- Among those who booked them separately, the Chinese share of visitors who stayed with friends or relatives is on par with the all-market average.

Propensity to make a purchase before or during trip

- Chinese visitors tend to book their various travel elements before they start their journey, especially for guided sightseeing tours and tickets to other tourist attractions.
- 89% of Chinese international travellers tend to plan their holiday abroad carefully before they leave China, which is above the all-market average (70%).

2.3 Booking and planning: lead-times

The Chinese tend to think about a trip to Britain fairly early as 42% of visitors to Britain started to think about it more than six months before the trip. An additional 33% did so in the three to six months window before the trip.

Just over half had decided to travel to Britain either three months before their trip or earlier. This is below the all-market average, showing the short lead-in time of Chinese travellers to Britain.

They would also start looking at options and prices for their trip to Britain later than the all-market average with a third doing so 3 months or more in advance of their trip, about another one in three 1-2 months before and the rest less than 1 month before.

Finally, 76% of Chinese past visitors to Britain had booked their trip less than 2 months ahead.

Booking through a travel agent, tour operator or travel comparison website is usually preferred to booking directly with the carrier/provider, whether Chinese visitors to Britain chose to book travel and accommodation together or separately.

2.4 Reaching the consumer

- Talking to friends, relatives and colleagues is the key source of influence for Chinese travellers trying to decide on their holiday destination.
- Travel agent or tour operators – whether through direct advice or via websites – have almost as much influence as word-of-mouth.
- Travellers’ destination reviews on websites completes the Chinese top 3 influences.
- Compared to other markets, the Chinese travellers tend to be more influenced by TV travel programmes, TV adverts, and also their traditional travel agent or tour operator through discussions or their brochures.

2.4 Reaching the consumer: traditional media

The Chinese are highly exposed to media and increasingly media driven overall

Broadcast media
- Most households own a TV set. There are over 3,300 local, regional and national TV channels in China, and over 2,600 radio stations. The latter ones are all state-owned.
- Main radio broadcaster include China National Radio and China Radio International. The biggest TV players are:
  - China Central TV (CCTV), largest broadcast media in China with national coverage, state-run and based in Beijing but with overseas offices, including in London.
  - China Global TV Network (CGTN), a state-run international broadcaster with networks in 5 other international languages, including French and English.
- Regional TV stations, with support of satellites, are gaining more popularity with a focus on lifestyle and entertainment programmes.
- China is also the largest cable TV market in the world with over 216m subscribers.
- Main players are Tencent, Baidu, LeTV. Most traditional TV channels and radio stations have to face the competition of streaming and OTT companies, like iQiyi, Youku, Tudou and Sohu.

Print media
- China is the third largest publishing sector for exporters, after the US and Germany. However, it is very fragmented with around 1,900 newspapers.
- There are also over 40 major press conglomerates publishing 100 million copies of newspapers every day. There are over 10,000 magazines across China.
- However it is mostly state-controlled: city newspapers are usually owned by local government or the local Communist Party. Sensitive information is monitored and can eventually be censored. However tourism information is not considered sensitive. Depending on the city, or region, press is more or less censored.
- Magazines are getting more specialised in their own niches. Trends Travellers, World Traveller and National Geographic Traveller are amongst top tourism magazines in China.
- Again online support is challenging the market situation as many of them are being digitised to gain more market share and penetration. China Daily, an official English-language paper is a good example of that.

2.4 Reaching the consumer: online media

Internet use
- China is the world’s largest online population with 731m of Internet users and an adoption rate of 53%.
- A system nicknamed the “Great Firewall of China” can block access to foreign or domestic websites, filtering URLs or censoring some keywords.
- Three main players are known as “BAT”:
  - Baidu: top search engine
  - Alibaba: e-commerce leader, allied with Sina which operates the Weibo microblog platform
  - Tencent: WeChat instant message platform
- According to CNNIC, 41% of Internet users use the Internet for travel booking (as of 2016). This represents a 15% increase on 2015 levels.

Social media
- The Chinese social media landscape is very unique. Many international players like Facebook are blocked in China. The main actors are local, and usually either messaging, blogging or microblogging services.
- Among the messaging apps and platforms, the most popular are:
  - WeChat with 762m monthly active users as of Q1 2016, 846m by the end of 2016.
  - Tencent’s QQ with 877m monthly active users as of Q1 2016.
- Popular blog platforms include WeChat Moments, Weibo and Tencent.

Mobile predominance:
- The CNNIC says 92.5% of China's online population can access the internet via a smartphone.
- Mobile payments is getting more and more popular in China, especially among the millennials.

2.4 Reaching the consumer: social media on holiday

Use of social media on holiday

- Chinese travellers tend to use more social media on holidays than the all-market average: only 19% of Chinese international travellers have not used social media during their last holiday abroad, compared to 29% across all markets.
- The Chinese social media market is dominated by local actors. WeChat, Youku and Weibo are among the most used social media platforms.
- 88% of Chinese international travellers regard their smartphone as essential whilst they are on holiday, and 65% their tablet.
- 82% of Chinese travellers like to be able to stay connected when they are on holidays, with 87% wishing it were cheaper to use their smartphone abroad.
- While on holiday, the Chinese tend to use more social media than the average international traveller, especially when finding or sharing recommendations on where to go to eat, drink or visit.

2.5 Perceptions of Britain

- The Chinese rate Britain highly overall, and in particular for tourism, built heritage, contemporary culture and its vibrant city life. However, their perceptions of the British scenic natural beauty and welcome are weaker: they ranked Britain 15th and 19th out of fifty nations respectively on these two attributes.
- Museums, films and opera are the cultural products or services most strongly associated with Britain by the Chinese.
- Chinese travellers would mostly expect a trip to Britain to be ‘fascinating’. They are also much more likely to consider it ‘romantic’, ‘relaxing’ or ‘spiritual’ than the global average.
- Australia and France are the destinations that the Chinese consider the ‘best place’ for delivering many of the aspects they want from a holiday destination.
- Areas of strength for Britain include the ease of getting around the country as well as its historic sites.

Chapter 3:
Access and travel trade
3. Access and travel trade

- Most Chinese visitors will reach Britain by air. 12% of visits arrive through the tunnel or by sea.
- Monthly airline seat capacity from China to Britain has grown significantly in the past five years. Chinese carriers have increased their capacity to the UK, creating new routes or converting seasonal routes into year-round services.
- The Chinese travel market is still very much dominated by offline bookings. However, online travel agents are making progress year on year.
- The online travel agent market also tends to be less fragmented than the traditional travel trade. Ctrip dominates this online travel market, but the “BATs” (Baidu, Alibaba, Tencent) are major players too.

3.1 Access: key facts

- Most Chinese travel to the United Kingdom by plane. A growing number of carriers are serving this route directly, and some recently converted their seasonal flights to the UK into year-round services.
- Seat capacity on direct flights from China to the UK has increased steadily since 2010. In 2016 it had more than doubled the 2009 seat capacity.
- Chinese visitors departing Britain by air pay £75 in Air Passenger Duty when travelling in economy class.
- Manchester is the only UK city served by direct routes from China, outside of London. However, several of the largest cities in China boast direct routes to the UK.
- About one in ten Chinese visitors still pair the UK with at least a visit to continental Europe as they come via a ferry or the Eurostar.

Most Chinese visitors travel to the UK by plane.

3.2 Travel trade: general overview

- The Home Office recognises over 200 travel agents under the ‘Approved Destination Status’ agreement in China. They are the only agents who can process leisure ADS visa applications, and thus operate leisure tours.
- The national tourist organisation CNTA is regulated by the State Council and is responsible for promoting the Chinese tourism industry as well as negotiating with overseas governments on ADS related matters.
- The main drivers of using an agent for international travel are: convenience; language barriers; visa preparation; knowledge gaps; value. Many Chinese visitors book group travel as a lot of them are first time international travellers and being part of a group can reassure them. However, the FIT segment keeps growing.
- Traditional agencies now have to face the competition of online travel agencies as the sector is growing: 41% of Internet users booked their travel online in 2016, a 15% increase on 2015.

3.2 Travel trade: practical information

General practical information:
• Business hours are usually 09:00–17:00 Monday to Friday.

Meetings:
• To understand China could be a daunting task for any foreigner. Traditional values and local business practices are different and diverse. What works in one part of China might not work in other parts of it.
• Try to understand the local perspective. Be empathetic, adaptable and patient and don’t be afraid to ask.
• Always prepare to be introduced through a middleman and use guanxi (connection) as much as you can. Don’t forget to give face (show respect) to the host and your partners.

Hospitality etiquette
• “Face” is important part in Chinese culture. Avoid embarrassing Chinese clients, even for a joke.
• Kissing and hugging are not a common form of greeting with the Chinese. Many of them would feel embarrassed, and so it is best to avoid it.
• Avoid politics as a conversation subject as it can be very sensitive.

Business meeting etiquette:
• There are a few simple steps to follow here:
  • Be punctual and prepared
  • Bring a small token gift to leave a good impression
• At the start of the meeting, the exchange of business cards is important: try to have a good supply of cards, possibly with contact details printed in Chinese on one side. You should present it with two hands, the right way round allowing the recipient to read the information.
• Titles are very important: address people directly by using their professional title or Mr, Mrs, or Miss, followed by the surname, starting with the most senior person in the room to begin and guide conversations.
• Chinese communications rules imply “saying it without saying it”: you will have to learn to read between the lines.
• To show humility when complimented, a Chinese person tends to deny it.
• The Chinese are interested in different culture and etiquettes and appreciate tips on understanding Western/British ways of doing things.
3.3 Caring for the consumer

Accommodation

• Chinese visitors value services with Chinese support (for example Chinese signage, Mandarin speaking staff, Chinese TV channels).
• The 2016 Hurun Report compares hotel requirement for the general travellers and the young affluent travellers. The former rank room cleanliness, personalised services and quality of the bedding as their main criteria; the latter value personalised services and the view from their room.

Food and drink

• With more and more affluent and younger consumers increasingly exposed to Western culture through their cosmopolitan life style, especially in urban coastal regions, more Chinese have started developing the so-called ‘Western palate’ and might appreciate wine, whisky (and other western spirits), cheese, dairy products, dessert etc. However, many Chinese tourists will recourse to familiar Chinese food once in a while, if not often.
• Breakfast is usually eaten between 06:00 – 09:00, lunch from 11:30-14:00 and dinner from 17:30 onwards, although customs are changing rapidly and becoming increasingly westernised.
3.3 Caring for the consumer

Mobile payment usage in China

- 52% of Chinese claim to use cash for only 20% or less of their monthly spending.
- 84% reported that they could accept a totally cashless life.
- Many dining establishments and retail outlets accept mobile payment.
- WeChat Pay can be used in 13+ countries outside of mainland China.
- Mobile Payment is now the standard of the travel industry ranging from hotels, attractions, taxis etc.

<table>

<td>600 million</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tencent mobile payment services’ average daily transactions in December</td>
<td>600 million</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Prospects for mobile payment in China

- Mobile Payments are narrowing the gap between urban and rural consumers in China with the penetration currently standing at 20% and 17% respectively.
- Alipay and WeChat Pay should be the two main forces of mobile payment in the next 10 years in China.
